PQ23623/20: To ask the Minister for Health the number of women availing of cervical screening since 1 March 2020; and if he will make a statement on the matter.

Dear Deputy,

I refer to the above Parliamentary Question.

The National Screening Service's (NSS) four programmes: BreastCheck, CervicalCheck, BowelScreen and Diabetic RetinaScreen were paused in March 2020. This move was taken on public health advice due to the situation with COVID-19. The pause in screening was put in place to protect participants and staff by complying with social distancing guidelines. In addition, the HSE temporarily redeployed staff and resources to the response to COVID-19. However, clinical staff continued to work within the programmes.

In June, the NSS announced a planned phased restart of its cancer screening programmes. CervicalCheck recommenced screening at the beginning of July.

By July 1 the programme had paused sending approximately 100,000 invitation letters during the height of the pandemic. CervicalCheck recommenced screening on 06 July. As of end of August 2020, approximately 78,000 invitation letters have been issued as part of the phased restart. The number of people who presented for a cervical screening test in primary care between 01 March 2020 and 11 September 2020 was 16,608.

We estimate that the CervicalCheck programme will have issued all 'paused' screening invitation letters (January to July 2020) by October 2020. It is expected that all people due a screening test in 2020 will have been invited by March 2021.

We are working with our host hospitals and service providers to maximise screening capacity within the constraints of COVID-19. We are working with our screening and laboratory facilities on an ongoing basis in order to minimise the impact of new processes and procedures and achieve maximum possible capacity during the managed restart of screening.

As screening restarts, we are ensuring all parts of the system have sufficient capacity to process the volume of tests. We are taking safety measures to protect both patients and staff, such as social distancing measures and face coverings. This can mean that appointments may take longer and that it may also take longer to get an appointment. We will continue to follow public health guidelines. The health and safety of our patients and staff is our priority. The resumption of screening services is dependent on the ongoing impact of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The NSS must comply with all HSE & Public Health social distancing guidelines, and reduced contact, to protect patients and staff where feasible during screening. This is an important part of supporting the containment of COVID-19. Implementing the new policies and procedures required to achieve this are having an impact on capacity and activity within screening. At all stages, the screening pathways, schedules and rounds are affected.

Screening is a population health measure for people who are presumed healthy and do not have symptoms. The aim of a population screening programme is to reduce the incidence of disease in a population. Screening is not a diagnostic tool and no screening test is completely accurate.

All screening programmes are limited by the sensitivity of the test which is the ability to detect those with the disease in a population (true positives). Screening programmes are likewise limited by the specificity of the test which is the ability to detect those who are free of the disease (true negatives). Therefore, a negative test result is not a guarantee that a person is clear of the condition, or that they won't develop the condition between screening appointments.

The NSS continues to encourage all people who are between screening appointments, or waiting for rescheduled appointments, to be aware of, and act upon, any symptoms associated with the conditions for which they are being screened. We ask that those people contact their GP, who will arrange appropriate follow-up care.
