Dear Deputy Tully,

The Health Service Executive has been requested to reply directly to you in the context of the following parliamentary questions, which were submitted to this department for response.

PQ: 30228/22

To ask the Minister for Health the details of the schools in which children's disability network teams are providing one-to-one therapy supports; the number of children assigned to each of the 91 children's disability network teams that are being provided with one-to-one therapy supports within their school setting in tabular form; and if he will make a statement on the matter.

PQ: 30229/22

To ask the Minister for Health the number of clinical therapists that were based within a school setting in the past five years prior to the introduction of children's disability network teams; the number of clinical therapists currently based within a school setting; and if he will make a statement on the matter.

HSE Response

In 2021, the remainder of ninety-one multidisciplinary CDNTs were established to provide services and supports for all children with complex needs within a defined geographic area.

Regardless of the nature of their disability, where they live, or the school they attend, every child with complex needs and their families have access to the full range of family centred services and supports of their CDNT according to their individual needs. This includes universal, targeted and specialist supports, such as individual therapeutic intervention and access to specialist consultation and assessment when needed. Supports are provided as is feasible in the child's natural environments - their home, school and community. The CDNTs do not collect data on the number of supports provided in each setting.

Since 2019, more than 475 development posts have been allocated to children's disability services across the country. These posts have been assigned based on a number of factors, including the existing ratio of staff to the number of children with disabilities in each area.

All CDNTs will provide supports for children with complex needs regardless of their diagnosis, where they live or where they go to school. School based supports will be provided where appropriate.

It is estimated that there are approximately 50,000 children with complex disability needs in the Republic of Ireland. A small proportion of these children attend special schools. 85 posts approved in mid-2021 were allocated to support services in thirty three special schools that had on-site therapy services prior to the establishment of CDNTs in 2021. Less than 2,500 children were enrolled in these special schools. The staff recruited to these posts report to the Children's Disability Network Manager and are part of the local CDNT. Children attending the thirty three special schools in question will receive their services in the school or in other settings as appropriate. The children attending these schools are part of the CDNT caseload and the sessions provided for them are not captured separately.

Yours sincerely
