PQ Question: To ask the Minister for Health if he will report on the new model of care for Persons presenting with self-harm in emergency departments; and if he will make a statement on the matter - Mark Ward

Dear Deputy Ward,

The Health Service Executive has been requested to reply directly to you in the context of the above Parliamentary Question, which you submitted to the Minister for Health for response. I have examined the matter and the following outlines the position.

In 2014 the National Clinical Programme for the Assessment and Management of Patients who Present to the Emergency Department (NCPSH) was introduced in a number of emergency departments (ED) that were operating 24/7.

In 2016 an agreed Model of Care was published and the service expanded. It established a clinical framework to ensure that any person who presents to the ED following self-harm or with suicide-related ideation receives a compassionate, empathic, validating response, and a therapeutic assessment and intervention from a suitably trained mental health professional. Every effort is made to ensure that a family member or supportive adult is involved in assessment and safety planning, and that they are followed up and linked to appropriate next care.

The implementation of the NCPSH since 2016 has provided several learning opportunities, and recent national and international evidence has provided further guidance on improving the service. The original Model of Care identified the need to develop access to urgent mental health care in a non-ED setting, along with ensuring people who present to the ED receive an optimum service. It is now timely to describe how those non-ED services can be developed and also to address ongoing improvements required in ED settings. An updated Model of Care National Clinical Programme for Self Harm and Suicide related Ideation provides a framework to improve services for all who self-harm or present with suicide-related ideation, regardless of where they present. It was launched by Minister Butler in February 2022. Chapter 3 outlines in detail the response for people who present to the emergency department.

In 2022 funding for 6 Clinical Nurse specialists was received to extend the SCAN services in 4 CHOs. We are planning for additional funding in 2023 to further advance the expansion of this programme.

I trust this information is of assistance to you. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any further queries.
