PQ Question: To ask the Minister for Health the mental health supports in place for adults with foetal alcohol spectrum disorder; and if he will make a statement on the matter. -Violet-Anne Wynne

Dear Deputy Wynne,

The Health Service Executive has been requested to reply directly to you in the context of the above Parliamentary Question, which you submitted to the Minister for Health for response. I have examined the matter and the following outlines the position.

As per my response to your Parliamentary Question 28121/23, Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder (FASD) is a group of disorders caused by prenatal alcohol exposure and are associated with a range of lifelong physical, mental, educational, social, and behavioural difficulties. Alcohol has an adverse effect on the developing brain, and on body organs. There is no safe amount of alcohol use during pregnancy.

There are no dedicated mental health supports for adults in Ireland diagnosed with Foetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder. Disability, primary care, paediatric services and mental health, are all involved in the provision of services for children and adults with FASD in Ireland. Patients with FASD can have mental health issues as any other person in the community. Patients with FASD who present with moderate to severe mental health issues are referred to their local community mental health teams for assessment and treatment and will be managed mainly by General Adult Psychiatrists.

The HSE has developed a position paper on the prevention of FASD which outlines 14 key actions for the HSE to be achieved within the next 5 years. This includes the development of a model of care for FASD. This body of work is been led by the Clinical Lead for FASD Prevention at the HSE Alcohol Programme and the FASD Expert Advisory Group:
