

Getting the results of your radiology examination

The results of your radiology examination should normally be available within a week. We will send a report to the GP, doctor or Consultant who requested your examination.

They may have already arranged to see you again to discuss the results, or may have told you how you will get the results, for example, by letter or through your GP.

If you do not know how you will be told the results of your examination, please ask the person who referred you, or the person who carries out the examination.

We are not able to discuss your results with you in person or over the telephone, as we have to report your examination results to the person who referred you to us. They will be able to read the results alongside your medical history, to give a full explanation of what they mean, and discuss with you what may need to happen next.

If you have not heard anything within 10 days from the person who referred you, please contact them directly.
