

Pregnant Women and attendance at Community Assessment Hubs for COVID 19:

Where following a telephone consultation with a GP if a concern is identified which requires a pregnant woman with suspected Covid symptoms to be examined face to face, clinical judgement is required with respect to where this examination should take place.

If deteriorating Covid is suspected, transfer to an acute hospital ED is advised with the appropriate level of urgency. Otherwise, where the problem is primarily obstetric, it is suggested that she and/or the doctor should liaise directly with the obstetric unit in the first instance as this is likely to be the most appropriate service.

Pregnant women should not normally be referred to COVID assessment hubs
