Lighting the Way

An information resource to support people who are bereaved through suicide

“Let yourself begin to heal. It is not a sign that we loved the person less. As the months pass we are slowly able to get through the day without the same degree of pain. That’s all right. It is a sign that we are working through our grief and beginning to accept that our loved one would want us to have some peace of mind in our life again…It can take a long time for family and friends to reach a place where they can look at the fullness of their loved ones life and not just their death. It takes time, a lot of time, for the pain to become bearable and for some of the good memories to come back— but they do and they will”.

Introduction

Suicide is a tragic and shattering reality, which not only brings a life to an untimely end but also has a far-reaching effect on family, friends, colleagues and communities.

Lighting the Way is an information support for those bereaved through suicide but also a resource for those working directly with individuals and families who have lost loved ones. This resource contains important information on the processes involved immediately after the suicide. It outlines levels of support available in the community and provides information around how to access these supports.

The development of Lighting the Way is a collaborative initiative between HAZ for the Cork North Community Work Department of the HSE South with An Garda Síochána as well as involving other organisations with a vested interest in the project.

The Gardaí are often the first to be called to the scene of a suspected suicide. One of the actions outlined in the Irish National Strategy for Action on Suicide Prevention: Reach Out 2005 - 2014 relates to the provision of bereavement support information to Gardaí so that they can provide this to the relatives. We feel that Lighting the Way meets this need.

This pack can be used by An Garda Síochána, HSE frontline staff and community services as well as other professionals in the provision of bereavement support information to those affected by suicide.

Why the Gardaí are involved

In any event involving an unexpected death, including a suicide, the Gardaí are notified and an inquest will be held. In such instances the Gardaí are acting as Coroner’s Officers and will enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death. They will inform the Coroner of the death and send him or her a report. The fact that uniformed Gardaí visit the relatives at their home or at the hospital does not mean that the death is regarded as suspicious. It will be necessary for them to take statements and have the body formally identified by a member of the family or relative of the deceased.

The role of the Coroner

The Local Authority appoints the Coroner. To qualify for the position a person must be a practising Barrister, Solicitor or Registered Medical Practitioner (Doctor) of at least five years standing. In Ireland, it is a legal requirement that deaths from unnatural causes, including suicide, are reported to the Coroner. The purpose is to determine who died and the circumstances surrounding their death. To establish this, the Coroner may request a post mortem and, at a later stage, may call an inquest into the death.

Support Tip

You can talk to your Garda before the inquest and he or she can provide tips and links to support the family.
You can also ask questions during the inquest at the Coroner’s Court
What is a Postmortem

A postmortem is an internal and external examination of the body of the deceased, which takes place in a hospital and is performed by a Pathologist. It is usually carried out within twenty-four hours of the arrival of the body at the hospital. It is performed in a professional and sensitive manner. There is no visible disfigurement of the body.

Support Tip

Some people find it helpful to discuss the postmortem results with their family doctor or arrange to meet the Pathologist who performed the postmortem and discuss the findings with him or her.

Funeral Arrangements

A sudden or unexpected death, by its nature, denies relatives of the deceased the opportunity to say good-bye. The funeral gives families a chance to arrange and plan the service and say goodbye. Partaking in the funeral arrangements and deciding on such issues as the clothes in which the deceased will be dressed, the type of coffin and the time at which the removal will take place can achieve this. Some choices the family will have to make will be deciding where the body will repose.

By not rushing the funeral, taking time to come to terms with what has happened and being with the deceased, some sense of comfort may be experienced. Other families who have experienced a death by suicide have suggested that it is very important to spend time with the body. Even if family members do not wish to view the deceased, a vigil beside the closed coffin is often helpful. Other families emphasise the benefits of and comfort in having a public funeral. It allows them the opportunity to pay tribute to the life of their loved one. Funeral arrangements should not be made until the body is released to the spouse or next of kin, which usually takes place immediately after the postmortem examination has been completed.
Death Certificate

The death cannot be registered until the postmortem report is received, which may take six weeks or longer. If the post-mortem examination shows that death was due to natural causes, and there is no need for an inquest, a Coroner’s Certificate will be issued to the Registrar of Births and Deaths who will then register the death and issue the death certificate. If death is due to unnatural causes, the Coroner is obliged to hold an inquest. The death will be registered by means of a Coroner’s Certificate when the inquest is concluded (or adjourned in some cases). Prior to the inquest being held, the Coroner’s office will, on request, provide an Interim Certificate of the fact of death, which may be acceptable to banks, insurance companies and other institutions.

The Inquest

An inquest is an inquiry in public by a Coroner, sitting with or without a jury, into the circumstances surrounding a death and can take place at any time from four weeks to possibly over twelve months after the death. The inquest will establish the identity of the deceased, how, when, and where the death occurred and the particulars which are required to be registered by the Registrar of Deaths. A Coroner is not permitted to consider civil or criminal liability; he or she must simply establish the facts. A verdict will be returned in relation to the means by which the death occurred. The range of verdicts open to a Coroner or Jury includes accidental death, misadventure, suicide, open verdict, and natural causes (if so found at the inquest). An inquest will not tell you why a person died by suicide. The Coroner will decide which witnesses should attend and in what order they will be required to give evidence. The Pathologist and Gardaí always give evidence at an inquest into a death suspected to be by suicide. Any person may give evidence which is relevant to the purpose of the inquest. Likewise, any person who has a lawful interest in the inquest may ask questions or be legally represented by a Solicitor or Barrister.
Such persons include:

- The family and next of kin of the deceased
- Personal representatives of the deceased
- Representatives of insurance companies

All inquests are held in public and reporters may be present. In practice, a minority of inquests are reported in the press. The Coroner is aware of the tragic circumstances and will endeavour to treat each one sympathetically. The existence of suicide notes will be acknowledged, but the contents will not be read out, except at the specific request of the next of kin and then only at the discretion of the Coroner. Every attempt is made to ensure that the inquest proceedings are not unduly intrusive on families concerned.

What happens if a suicide note is left?

If a suicide note is addressed to a specific individual, the individual can collect the letter from the coroner’s office. This must be done in person to ensure that it does not get lost in the post.

Registration of the death

The death may be registered at any Registrar of Births, Deaths and Marriages office. The death can be registered in the council area where the person has lived or died.

A death must be registered in person and not by letter or telephone. If an inquest has been held the coroner will have registered the death within 5 days of the hearing and you will simply need to ask for a copy of the death certificate.
Registration of the death

When registering the death you need to have the following:

- Full name and surname of deceased
- The deceased’s Personal Public Service Number
- Sex, marital status, occupation and date of birth or age of the deceased
- Date and place of death
- If the deceased was a child, the occupation of the parent(s) or guardian(s)
- Medical Certificate of the cause of death.

The Citizens Information Service can be contacted for support around other issues you may face following a death such as:

- Issues arising immediately after a death
- Access to money
- Income Supports
- Income Tax
- Capital Acquisitions Tax
- Dealing with the deceased person’s estate

Understanding your feelings

You can survive
Know you can survive. You may not think so, but you can.

Deal with ‘why’
It is normal for people to struggle with ‘why’ it happened until you no longer need to know ‘why’ or until you are satisfied with not having all of your questions answered.

Overwhelming feelings are normal
Know that you may feel overwhelmed by the intensity of your feelings but remember that all your feelings are normal. Feelings of anger, guilt, confusion and forgetfulness are common. Remember all of these feelings are normal: you are in mourning.

You may feel anger
Be aware you might feel angry with the person who has taken their life, with the world, with God, with yourself. It’s OK to express your anger in a safe way. You might feel guilty for what you think you did or did not do. Your guilt can turn into regret through forgiveness.

Find help if you have suicidal thoughts
Having suicidal thoughts is common. It does not mean that you will act on these thoughts. However, get help if these thoughts are frequent or if you are thinking of acting on them. Remember to take one moment or one day at a time.
Tears are healing
Let yourself cry if you want to. Find a good listener and call someone if you need to talk. Give yourself time to heal. (Remember there are many listening resources listed at the back of this book)

It was not your choice
Remember the choice was not yours. No one person is the only influence in another person’s life. People are influenced and guided by many different things and people in their lives.

Expect setbacks
Strong emotions can return from time to time. This is normal but it’s a good idea not to make any major decisions when you’re struggling with strong emotions.

Extra Support and Counselling

Not everyone will need bereavement counselling and many people find the support they need by talking with their family and friends but don’t be afraid to get professional help if this is not the case for you. Sometimes family, friends and those closest are unable to help in the process of mourning, maybe because they too are grieving or maybe you do not want to talk to someone you know about the feelings you have. Bereavement counselling can offer the opportunity to explore, understand and work through feelings of grief. Often just reassurance is needed. (See supports listed at back and local information within this booklet)
Pyramid of Bereavement Supports

Types of supports most needed during and after bereavement.

1. Needed most often...
   - Information and support from friends, family, neighbours and those known to the person.

2. Needed sometimes...
   - Extra Support from services locally, grieving support in various ways, listening services etc.

3. Needed less frequently...
   - Therapy, Psychotherapy, Psychology, Counselling, Medical
Needed less frequently

This type of support is specialised and provided by professionals. (Psychotherapy, Psychology, Counselling, Medical type of supports). Some people develop complications or become stuck in their grieving process and this type of extra support may be required. Some community-based services directly provide these supports. There are also services in the community who provide this level of support but bring professionals in to do so if requested by individuals.

Needed sometimes

Some people may need extra support with their grief. This could be because of the additional traumatic nature of a death by suicide. It is generally short-term support but can be for longer also. Bereavement support groups, mental health groups and listening services can help. These supports or information relating to such supports is available from services across the community.

Needed most often

Most people who are bereaved will find the support they need, practical help with tasks and social support from people around them such as family, friends and local services. Providing information and signposting people onto services they need is a role that many community service providers fulfil in the community. Professionally training is not necessary but an awareness of the grieving process and the ability to listen is required.
Caring for those bereaved

- Allow bereaved people to express the pain they may be feeling at this time.
- Allow them to talk about their loss as often and as much as they are able and want to.
- Do not avoid mentioning the death because of fear of reminding them about the pain. They will never forget.
- Let your genuine concern and caring show.
- Be available for them to talk.
- Talk about memories and the special qualities of the person who died.

What can friends do?

Often friends may not know how to comfort and support someone who has been recently bereaved by suicide. These suggestions come from others who have lost a loved one to suicide and may be of assistance in helping friends to know what they can do.

- Keep in touch on a regular basis. Don’t abandon your friend.
- There may be times when your offers of help are refused. Try again later. If you feel awkward because you don’t know what to say, be honest - “I don’t know what to say.. is there anything I can do?”
- Send a note - if you don’t know what to say, you can just write “thinking of you”.
- Offer to do something practical such as making a meal, paying bills or doing the shopping or washing.
- Offer to find out resources and information for them.
- Anticipate birthdays, holidays, anniversary dates and other celebratory events where the person’s absence will be felt more keenly.
- Be kind to yourself. It can be draining to share your friend’s loss. You also may be affected by this loss and have your own grief to deal with. Take time to do some special things for yourself.
Common Questions.

Why did it happen?

When someone dies it is not uncommon for the bereaved to question why the person died and to try and understand why it happened and create some meaning of the event.

However, with suicide, the questions seem endless. Why did it happen? Why didn’t he/she tell me how they were feeling? Did I really know him/her? Why did this happen to me? Why do I have to suffer so much? Am I the only one who feels that way? Etc

All these questions are normal responses to a suicide and an honest attempt to create some meaning. However, suicide often does not make sense to the bereaved. That is why it is important to mind oneself after bereavement by suicide and get support to deal with the grieving process.

Will it get easier?

Losing a loved one is always difficult and it takes time to grieve. If you allow yourself to grieve and address the challenges that suicide brings (e.g. changes within the family, anger with the person that committed suicide or changes of communication about them) appropriately, it will get easier. Dealing with the pain of the death and living your own life does not mean that you are forgetting or dishonouring the person that died. You do not need to be in pain to remember a loved one.

It may help to make contact with support services to help you in dealing with the immense pain that you are going through after a death by suicide.
What about medication, drugs and alcohol, do they help?

After suicide emotions of sadness, anger, disgust, guilt or fear can be intense and sometimes overwhelming. Some people feel numb and others feel as if they are on an emotional rollercoaster. Therefore it can be helpful to discuss these emotions with your local GP, who can prescribe medication as a ‘first aid’ measure if necessary. Further on it may be helpful to speak to other professionals who are trained to deal with suicide bereavement such as a counsellor or psychotherapist as they can help you to work through the emotions and offer support throughout your grieving process.

Using alcohol or illegal drugs to escape the pain are not helpful as they will prolong and complicate your grief and add further problems to your situation.

Should I tell people if it was suicide?

Sometimes it can be difficult to talk about the cause of death and people can be fearful of other people’s reactions in relation to suicide.

Give yourself some time to think about what you want to say if being asked and how you can stay truthful to yourself and your relationships, whilst supporting yourself and acknowledging that you might have different needs at different stages of your grieving process.

It is important that you do whatever you feel comfortable with when talking about the death of your loved one.

Also remember, that if people know it was suicide they may be able to support you more adequately or may be able to point you in the right direction for support service that will be able to help you through this difficult time.
What do I say when people ask me how many people are in the family?

This may be an awkward question for you. Your loved one will always be part of your life but it may be that you don’t want to invite further questions. ‘Do I include the person who has died or am I denying their existence if I don’t include them?’ Say whatever you are comfortable with. This may depend on who is asking the question and their reasons for it. It may also depend on how you are feeling that day.

Early grief and mourning

Shock
The death of someone close to you comes as a tremendous shock. When someone dies unexpectedly this shock is intensified and when someone takes their own life the shock can be particularly acute. The days and weeks immediately following a death. Some experience it more severely and for longer than others.

Numbness
Following the death of someone you have been close to you may experience feelings of numbness. What has happened may seem unreal or dreamlike. The thought ‘this can’t really be happening’ may recur. The numbness of early bereavement may itself be a source of distress and misunderstanding if one wonders, for example, why one cannot cry at the funeral. In fact, this numbness is only delaying emotional reactions and may be a help in getting through the practical arrangements. This feeling of numbness gradually wears off allowing you move on in the process of grieving.
Disbelief

It is natural to have difficulty believing what has happened. Where a death was untimely and sudden it is even harder to grasp that the loss is permanent and real. While it is possible to “know” that a loved one has died, it can be difficult to “accept” and disbelief often surrounds the bereavement. A large part of you will resist the knowledge that the person who has died is not going to be around any more. Confusion, panic and fear are common during this struggle between “knowing” they have died and disbelief.

Searching

Numbness and shock tend to give way to an overwhelming sense of loss. Many bereaved people find themselves instinctively “searching” for their loved one, even though they know that they are dead. This may involve calling their name, talking to their photographs, dreaming they are back or looking out for them amongst people in the street. This denial of a painful reality is a natural part of mourning. Realising that a death has really happened and is irreversible takes some time.

Anguish and pining

The understanding that a loved one is really dead brings with it tremendous misery and sadness. As the loss begins to make itself felt, pining for the person who has died is common. Powerful and desperate longings – to see and touch them, to talk and be with them - may be felt. The intensity of emotions is often frightening and may leave the bereaved feeling devastated. Emotional pain is often accompanied by physical pain. It is common to go over and over what has happened, replaying things in your head or talking them through. The need to talk about a loved one, following their death, is part of the natural struggle to counteract their loss.
Physical and emotional stress

Losing someone close to you is a major source of stress. This stress may show itself in both physical and mental ways. Restlessness, sleeplessness and fatigue are common. You may also have bad dreams. Loss of memory and concentration are common. You may experience dizziness, palpitations, shakes, difficulty breathing, choking in the throat and chest. Intense emotional pain may be accompanied by physical pain. Sadness may feel like a pain within. Muscular tension may lead to headaches, neck and backaches. Loss of appetite, nausea and diarrhoea are also common and women’s menstruation may be upset. Sexual interest may also be affected. The physical effects of shock usually pass with time.

Myths and Facts About Grief

Myth: The pain will go away faster if you ignore it.

Fact: Trying to ignore your pain or keep it from surfacing will only make it worse in the long run. For real healing it is necessary to face your grief and actively deal with it.

Myth: It’s important to be “be strong” in the face of loss.

Fact: Dealing with loss is not easy. Emotions can be quite overwhelming and intense. Expressing these emotions for e.g. crying does not mean you are weak but will help you through the natural grieving process. You don’t need to ‘protect’ your family or friends by putting on a brave front. ‘Being strong’ includes knowing what your needs are when dealing with loss and working through it. This may include speaking to your GP or seeking support service that will help you deal with your bereavement appropriately.

‘Being strong’ does not mean suffering in silence!
Myth: If you don’t cry, it means you aren’t sorry about the loss.

Fact: Crying is a normal response to sadness, but it’s not the only one. Those who don’t cry may feel the pain just as deeply as others. They may simply have other ways of showing it.

Myth: Grief should last about a year.

Fact: There is no right or wrong time frame for grieving. How long it takes can differ from person to person. It is important to mind yourself throughout the grieving process and consider outside support to help you through it.

Try to remember:

- You are NOT responsible for the death
- It takes time to heal
- The intense pain does not go on forever
- It does soften
- Gradually there will be more good days than bad days
- This does not mean you will forget and stop loving the person who died

Helping children with grief

Children express their feelings differently to adults. It is normal for a child to appear as though everything is ok. It is important for children to know that they don’t need to feel sad all of the time unlike adults, children grieve in “bits and pieces. Many of the fears that parents/caregivers have about causing greater distress for their children are not realised, as most children, even very young children, take the news in a “matter of fact way”
Talking to your child about suicide

Often the first question that arises for a parent is “what should I tell my children about suicide?” Many parents/caregivers have had little experience talking with children about death let alone suicide, and are worried about how their children will react and how the news will affect their child in the long-term. Parents often express great relief that they have spoken to their children about suicide.

- Be honest and consistent
- Ask your child what death means to them, explain it to them and be sure they understand.
- Use simple language to explain suicide.
- Maintain routines and expectations such as bedtime, homework, sporting activities and playing with friends. This gives children a sense of consistency and security.

Suggested activities to do with young children

- Create a memory box. Put mementoes of your loved one into a special box and look at them anytime.
- Look at pictures of past good times.
- Read together. Books can encourage understanding and discussion (see suggested reading and further reading p 69 )
- Use a toy phone to talk about what happened.
- Draw or paint to show how you feel. You can make a ‘feelings’ book. Include some things that make you feel safe or loved. Put the date on each page to show how your feelings change as time goes on.

Memorials and Social Networking

Public discussion, following a death by suicide, can have both a positive and negative impact on those bereaved, including family members, friends and wider communities. Nowadays, these wider communities extend beyond more traditional settings – like schools, colleges and workplaces – to include online communities that the deceased person may have belonged to. The response in online settings has become an important area to consider when someone dies. It is recommend that any public communication about a suicide avoids glamorising the death in any way; and avoids providing details of particular suicide methods. This will help you manage a safe and sensitive response to a death by suicide.

It is recommended to take this approach to online communication as well as in more traditional settings.

Online communications include:
social networking websites that large groups of people can access; and more private interactions, such as one-to-one instant messaging.
At the moment, Facebook is the single largest social networking website in Ireland with an estimated 1.73 million users. Over 70% are under 35 years old. (Source: checkfacebook.com). Facebook can be an online outlet for the bereaved to remember and mourn their friend. However, as in more traditional settings, it is important to encourage safe, helpful and responsible conversation online following a death. Just as public discussion following a death is controlled in the context of funeral speeches, the conversation online can be managed too. To help with this, Facebook have put in place procedures that can be followed when a loved one dies.

How to manage a Facebook profile when someone dies

When a Facebook user dies, Facebook ‘memorializes’ their account to protect their privacy. Memorializing an account removes certain sensitive information – for example, status updates and contact information. Facebook sets privacy so that only confirmed friends can see the profile or locate it in a search. The deceased’s Facebook ‘Wall’ remains so that friends and family can leave posts in remembrance. Memorializing an account also prevents all login access to it.

How to ‘memorialize’ a Facebook account

When someone dies, please report the information to:

www.facebook.com/help/contact.php?showform=deceased

This web address will bring you to a special Facebook form which you fill in and submit to the network’s administrators. Facebook can then memorialize this person’s account. Facebook says that to protect the privacy of the deceased user, it cannot provide login information for the account to anyone. They do, however, honour requests from close family members to close the account completely.
How to remove a Facebook account

Immediate family members may ask Facebook to remove a loved one’s account. This will completely remove the account from Facebook so that no one can view it. Facebook will not restore the account or provide information on its content unless required by law. If you ask for an account to be removed and are not an immediate family member of the deceased person, Facebook will not process your request, but they will memorialize the account. To make a request to memorialize or remove a profile, go to www.facebook.com/help/contact.php?showform=deceased.

If you have a special request regarding a deceased person’s user account, go to www.facebook.com/help/contact.php?showform=memorializespecialrequests

This form is only for accounts that have already been memorialized. Facebook will also remove a memorial group if a family member asks them to do so.
The GP: your primary carer and main access route to services

In Ireland the main route to accessing all health care services is your GP, this is equally true for mental health services.

The GP can refer to St. Michael’s Unit, Out Patients in Block 7 or the Home Based Crisis Team for City North West and City North East Sectors.

The Home Based Crisis Team was set up by the HSE Mental Health services to work with people in a mental health crisis in the community. The basic aim is to treat the person in their home where at all possible. A person can be referred by their GP to the Home Based Crisis Team and will then be supported for approximately 4 weeks at which time the case will be reviewed.

Selective GPs can refer to the Clinical Nurse Specialists in Primary Care who would do group work or individual work.

All teams have access to Consultants, Non Consultant Hospital Doctors, Nurses, Community Mental Health Nurses (home visits), Occupational Therapists, Social Workers, Psychologists, Counsellors and Addiction Counsellor, Cognitive Behavioural Therapist, Art Therapist, Family Support Nurse, Psychotherapist and Early Intervention with Psychosis Nurse.

This referral will be assessed firstly at the Out Patients and then referred to any of the above which will be based on the need of the referred person.

Community Supports

Introduction

There are many organisations, services and information providers who can support people through a bereavement by offering support and understanding on the wide range of issues connected to suicide. These supports range from signposting and information, listening services to counselling and medical type supports.

This section contains a list of community services, organisations and groups who can provide various levels of support, access to activities and connections with supportive groups. Becoming involved in a group or activity can be a great support in itself.

Several national organisations facilitate bereavement/mental health specific groups in your local community. These groups provide a safe setting where free expression of grief is acceptable, confidentiality is observed and compassion and non-judgemental attitudes prevail.

If you are looking for a specific level of support such as one-to-one counselling or an informal listening service please note the triangular symbols, which indicate what different services can offer in the community (see Pyramid of Bereavement Support p12 for more information)

Cork City Partnership
Knocknaheeney
(formerly We The People)

What is available

We are a locally based outreach community project who work closely with the local community and provide a range of supports which include: secretarial and resource supports to the local community; supports to residents groups; education courses and programmes; employment supports; Health, Welfare & Wellbeing programmes, youth activities, supports to the elderly, environmental issues/initiatives.

As a project we respond on a daily basis to queries and signpost people to the relevant supports and resources.

How it works

A typical visit will depend on the type of service that an individual requires. This could be a one to one session organised in advance with the individual or a group session prearranged or drop in depending on the preference of the individual.

Referral process: As appropriate

Cork Mental Health and Housing Association

What is available

Cork Mental Health Foundation provides education and awareness on mental health. We run workshops in secondary schools and deliver presentations to community groups, workplaces etc on mental health. We run several projects throughout the year such as Public Speaking and Reflecting Through Art Exhibition as well as an annual seminar pitched entirely at young people. The housing association provides housing to people with mental health difficulties, we currently have 28 houses throughout Cork City and County.

How it works

We do not provide any specific bereavement support or counselling service but would certainly signpost to other more relevant support service when needed.

Referral process: we do not have a formal referral process, (apart from our housing which does through a form available from the office).

Springboard is a family support service aimed at supporting the most vulnerable families. People often seek out the service with stress related issues, anxiety, worry, mental health difficulties. The service operates a number of specific support groups and programmes at various times throughout the year.

How it works

When a person comes to the service for whatever the reason, an initial meeting is held with them to assess what is going on for them and determine what is needed for the person and situation. A Springboard Project Worker follows up this meeting on a one to one basis with the person. They then work toward connecting the person with appropriate resources and supports dependant on their situation and level of need.

Coiscim is a counselling / psychotherapy centre. The service offers low cost counselling for bereavement, coping difficulties, couples counselling, general grief & loss, marriage issues, relationship issues and stress. Coiscim Counsellors are based in different locations throughout Cork, City & County & Kerry. Our referral counsellor will discuss with you your preferred location when choosing a counsellor for you.

How it works

On calling our office your name and number will be taken. Our referral counsellor will call you back and take some details to help her to refer you to a counsellor who would best suit your needs. Together you will agree a fee that you can afford. She will then give your name and the agreed fee to the counsellor allocated to you. She will then call you back with the name and number of your counsellor who will be expecting a call from you. When you make contact you set up your appointment time together.

The glass artwork

The glass artwork featured throughout Lighting the Way was created by a small dedicated team, specifically for this resource. The group worked with artist Charlotte Donovan as part of Niche Community Arts for Health Programme. They met weekly, and discussed the purpose of the resource, while exploring the creative possibilities of fused glass. The group decided that they wanted to make a lamp which would be lit from inside as a memorial and a beacon of hope, and that the form would be a 3 sided pyramid, each with 3 layers. The structure of the pyramid symbolises the support that we can all give to each other - for each side would be unable to stand alone.

Glass artists: Paul Collins, Eileen O’Leary, Triona Gorman
